We seldom think of time as real. Time just is Or is it? Time passes and is lost forever in all but our memories. But what if we found that we were living in a time frame different from that of the rest of the areal worlda? That time was not standing still but was slowly being reclaimed. What would we, or could we, do with that knowledge? Maybe knowing the future is something that we are not prepared to handle Historians often say that if we study the past we can predict the future. History repeats itself and has for eons. This is the story of such an event, rather a series of eventsa]the thoughts and actions resulting from knowing what was to come and the unexpected consequences that resulted. Maybe we should have studied history more thoroughly.
