Review

James Fallows, National Correspondent, The Atlantic

“For nearly a decade, Rebecca MacKinnon has been at the center of evolving debates about how the Internet will affect democracy, privacy, individual liberties, and the other values free societies want to defend. Here she makes a persuasive and important case that, as with other technological revolutions through history, the effects of today’s new communications systems, for human liberation or for oppression, will depend not on the technologies themselves but rather on the resolve of citizens to shape the way in which they are used.”

Joi Ito, Director, MIT Media Lab

“Consent of the Networked will become the seminal book firmly establishing the responsibility of those who control the architecture and the politics of the network to the citizens who inhabit our new digital world. Consent of the Networked should be required reading for all of those involved in building our networked future as well as those who live in it.”

Anne-Marie Slaughter, Bert G. Kerstetter ‘66 University Professor of Politics and International Affairs, Princeton University

“Consent of the Networked is a must-read for anyone interested in freedom of personal and political expression in the 21st century. It’s accessible, engaging, and periodically hair-raising. It should have the same impact on public awareness of the vital issues surrounding Internet freedom that ‘An Inconvenient Truth’ had with regard to climate change.”

Mary Robinson, Former UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, and President of Ireland

“The Internet poses the most complex challenges and opportunities for human rights to have emerged over the last decade. Rebecca MacKinnon’s book is a clear-eyed guide through that complexity.”

Joseph S. Nye, Jr., University Distinguished Service Professor, Harvard University, and author of The Future of Power

“Cyber power and governance of the internet is one of the great unsolved problems of the 21st century. Rebecca MacKinnon has written a wonderfully lively and illuminating account of the issues we face in this contentious area. It is well worth reading.”

Craig Newmark, founder of Craigslist

“A growing number of people throughout the world are counting on the Internet to move their countries in a more democratic direction. Consent of the Networked describes what’s happening, successes and failures, what’s next, and what needs to be done. It’s the real deal.”

Kirkus Reviews

“An incisive overview of the global struggle for Internet freedom. . . . In her wide-ranging book, MacKinnon details the many ways in which governments, corporations and others are using the Internet—from empowering people to helping authoritarian dictators survive.”

Booklist

“A vitally important analysis of Internet manipulation that should be read by anyone relying on the web for work or pleasure.”

rebecca这本书其实更可以被看成是一本介绍性的书籍，前四部分都是以实例为基础讲互联网自由所面临的侵蚀和挑战，包括如何传统民族国家对赛博空间的蠢蠢欲动，以及和民族国家分享权力的大型互联网公司的治理缺陷和颟顸，或者干脆为利益而牺牲公民的宪法权利，如何让自由在赛博空间里不受政府或者企业的侵蚀？rebecca认为目前的互联网尚处于霍布斯的"state of nature"，我们要努力使其向洛克社会契约的方向发展，正如书名所示，在企业和网民的关系中，体现出 the consent of the governed. 但是这种契约不会自动到来，就像民主不是自动到来的一样，需要无数行动者去争取，才能给互联网自由带来希望。即使是身处后威权时代的中国人，这本书依然有一读的价值

Very provocative. From the "consent of the governed" to "consent of the networked", and the frameworks of conventional nation-state fail to address the problems regarding internet governance. 不足之处关于democracy还是西方视角的Lockean view,案例多有重复，文笔略啰嗦。
