A compilation of essays and articles on the subject of Palestine, and on the history of the Palestinian struggle for national identity. Spanning the period from 1968 to the present, the author, described as one of the most important cultural critics of our time, tells the story of the struggles of the Palestinian people. Edward W. Said is Professor of the Doctoral Programme in Comparative Literature at Columbia University, and is the author of "Culture and Imperialism". He also delivered the 1994 Reith Lectures for the BBC.
