Essential Reading for landscape architects, and should become a textbook for everyone interested in the philosophy and practice of environmental improvement...

Clearly this book is a major environmental event'

-Design

'An astonishingly clear study of the man-made landscape of the world, its beginnings, its history and its future"

- Daily Telegraph

The Compass of this excellent book is quite staggering'

- Financial Times

From small gardens to complete cities, humans have always moulded their environment to express or symbolize ideas – power, order, comfort, harmony, pleasure, mystery. It is Geoffrey and Susan Jellicoe's distinction to have realized that these are manifestations of a single process, and to have linked them all together.

Taking twenty-eight 'cultures' from Ancient Mesopotamia to the Post-Renaissance West, the authors first summarize the social and intellectual background, then describe how this is expressed in terms of landscape, and finally demonstrate their case in a series of picture spreads showing what actually happened. The final section – about a fifth of the whole – is devoted to planning since 1945.

This edition has been revised and expanded to bring the text completely up to date, and show the implications of today's trends in landscape architecture and planning for tomorrow's world.

只翻阅了英国和法国园林部分，发现中文翻译较差，文中注出的园林原文名基本有误。例如，p.240, Stourhead Garden 写成 Stoured; p.183, 维康府邸被译作沃克斯园不谈，其名称Château de Vaux-le-Vicomte竟然被写成Van-le-Vicomit。简直令人发指。其余略去不谈，这两个例...
