The thirty-four stories in this volume span Chekhov's creative career. They present a wide spectrum of comic and serious themes and a variety of techniques. (His short novels, available in another Norton volume, Seven Short Novels by Chekhov, have been omitted.) Two of the stories have been newly translated for this edition by Professor Matlaw; the other translations, by Constance Garnett, Ivy Litvinov, and Marion Fell, have been revised in accordance with contemporary usage. Footnotes have been supplied wherever necessary to explain peculiarities of Russian life and the historical epoch.

Backgrounds are provided by a rich selection of Chekhov's letters, in new translation by Professor Matlaw, and by Gorky's famous essay on Chekhov, translated by Ivy Litvinov. The critical essays offer general views of Chekhov's art and achievement and detailed analyses of particular stories. The critics are D. S. Mirsky, A. B. Derman (whose essay has been translated from the Russian especially for this edition), Renato Poggioli, Gleb Struve, Donald Rayfield, Karl Kramer, Virginia Llewellyn, and Nils Åke Nilsson. A Selected Bibliography is supplied as an aid for further study.

If I could read in Russian....

能把沉重而痛苦的生活用如此润物细无声的感觉写出来，不愧是大师。

短小精炼 我最喜欢的短片是

讀Chekov的東西，總是有那種如大地般溫暖深厚的感覺

R4 read by Alistair McGowan. An Incident, A Play, The Old House, Ivan Matveyitch, Bad Weather. “陪审团判他无罪。”

-----
Misery, Oysters, Vanka, Anyuta, The Bishop

-----
都是很有代表性的短篇，但还必须要再看中长篇和剧本。Norton总是良心提供很多文论，只是字小且书贵。Mirsky的文章很有用。

-----
The lottery ticket写的大出我所料

"melancholy"," desolate"," mental inertia"," gloomy ".

是因为读了The Reader，里面提到契诃夫写的“A Woman with a Dog”，才了这本书。零零散散读了几个短篇，为契氏对人性的刻画和对人生的理解的深刻所折服。以后还要捡起来好好读。
