This book fills the knowledge gap by teaching health care providers and diabetes educators how and what to teach patients, how to motivate patients, how to train other health care professionals to teach patients, and how to develop, market, and find funding for education programs. A practical manual for health care providers, it is intended to motivate and provide applicable skills needed to develop education programs or teach existing programs. It deals with the ethical and legal issues as well as creative teaching techniques designed to add fun to classes.
