A man fell from a very tall building. Why didn't he die? Why did a dead woman have a frozen chicken under her hat? What fell out of an old man's ear, and why did everybody laugh? And how did a cow fly? Find the answers in these strange stories.

作者介绍:

The writers of this book, Phil Healey and Rick Glanvill, met in Newcastle in the north of England in 1992. They loved telling and listening to strange and funny stories and laughing with their friends. One day, they sent some of these stories to the Guardian newspaper in London. The people there laughed at the stories too, so they put one story in the newspaper every week.

In 1991 Phil and Rick put their best stories in the book. They called it Urban Myths. It sold well. They had many stories, so there was a second book, and then more books. They also told stories on radio and television.

They live in London now. Phil teaches at a university, and Rick is a writer.
