The first title in this series will explore the huge area of people stock photography. Any image stock photographers produce may be used by a number of different sources e.g. magazine editors, galleries, publishers, art directors. As society becomes increasingly introspective, the demand for images of other people's lifestyles grows rapidly. The author explores the various ways in which a subject can be expressed through pictorial and textual examination of different approaches. There are also sections on how, where and when photographers can sell their images, and how much for. Useful contact details and web addresses are also included.
