"I know who you are."

"No you don't."

"I'm coming after you."

"No you won't."

"Watch me."

Special FBI agent Jay Fletcher knows how to catch serial killers. She's developed a computer program that identifies the most vicious murderers in America.

But Jay's Washington bosses have told her to stop. She can't use her program. It violates the Constitution. It violates these sick killers' civil rights.

Now Jay's been transferred to a tiny office in Sante Fe. She's instructed to stay out of multiple murder cases. As far as Washington knows, she is.

Like hell she is.

Jay is going on-line.

She's going to track down the killers.

What will she do when she finds them?

She says...watch me.
