In Burning Houses Andrew Harvey has taken the novel form and extended it to grand opera, with all its glitter and drama, flourish and tragedy.

Charles, a writer living in Paris is invited by Adolphe, a famous film director, to read his novel to him. Their meetings enmesh the reader in two plots: one developing in the encounters between

Charles and Adolphe; the other contained in Charles's novel] the account of his relationship with Mark a married man.

Like a turning crystal, the story reveals the facets of love: the sexual passion between Charles and Mark; the long friendship between Charles and Anna (an outspoken beauty who appears in both plots); and the himinous platonic love between Adolphe and Charles that is akin to a merging of souls. Each character undergoes a transformation, a growth into knowledge that brings the reader to a deep understanding of self-awareness through suffering, honesty, and humor.

Already acclaimed for the brilliance of his first three books A Journey in Ladakh; No Diamonds. No Hat. No Honey; and One Last Mirror Andrew Harvey breaks through again with this new novel, which will evoke for many readers Manuel Puig's Kiss of the Spider Woman and Andrew Holleran's Dancer from the Dance.
