Look for Atoosa Rubenstein, Editor-in-Chief, in Seventeen magazine's New Reality Show!

Seventeen magazine's wildly popular column about the embarrassments and humiliations we all endure is now collected in one hilarious volume.

One thing's for sure: we can ALL relate...

Each month, Seventeen magazine rounds up the most hysterical bloopers from real girls' lives in its "Traumarama" column--a consistent favorite of Seventeen readers. Now the editors of Seventeen have compiled the best stories into one hilarious book. From totally un-planned wardrobe malfunctions to saying the absolute wrong thing in front of the absolute right guy, these are tales everyone can relate to. Even Atoosa Rubenstein, the editor-in-chief of Seventeen has had her moments! In every chapter, she bravely dishes about the times she's found herself red-faced. And, as if the stories themselves weren't enough for a huge laugh-fest, fantastic full-color illustrations appear throughout to capture the complete embarrassment it all it's glory!

Atoosa Rubenstein contributes five personal stories and the introduction. Her picture will be on the cover as well within the book-and she is very recognizable to the target audience.

Traumarama will be in-stores in December 2005--in time to coincide with the big finale of the reality show--the search for America's "young sweetheart"--which will air through the Fall.
