About Author

Alice Thomas Ellis is one of England's most widely admired writers. Her fiction includes The Sin Eater (1977), which received a Welsh Arts Council Award for a "book of exceptional merit"; The 27th Kingdom (1982), which was nominated for a Booker Prize; and The Inn at the Edge of the World (1990), which won the 1991 Writers' Guide Award for Best Fiction. Her most recent novel is Fairy Tale (1996).

Apart from her four volumes of "Home Life" columns, which were originally written for the Spectator between 1986 and 1989, her non-fiction includes a collection of essays entitled Cat Among the Pigeons (1994) and A Welsh Childhood (1990), her rich and humorous account of growing up in Wales. A Welsh Childhood was issued in A Common Reader Edition in 1996.

Alice Thomas Ellis has five children and lives in London and Wales.
