"In this book, the first collection of his prose works, he accounts in scintillating language for the peculiarly modern and sometimes deliquescent fervor that has prompted his poems. Few poets have written so characteristically about their own craft." --Perspective --U.S.A.

"These are rich essays, simply constructed yet richly and elegantly written." -- Hayden Carruth, The Nation

"The most welcome attribute of the book is its humane good sense, equally manifest whether Stevens is discussing a desolate Pennsylvania churchyard. Plato's images or the personalities of those who prefer a drizzle in Venice to a hard rain in Hartford." --New Republic

"It is a rare pleasure to breathe the atmosphere of confidence and wholeness which distinguishes the world of Wallace Stevens. Here we are refreshed by certainty without fragmentariness, by joyous possibilities without dishonesty. Here we find a moral and philosophical center through which reality may be repossessed and re-created with each new poetic act." -- C. Roland Wagner, The Hudson Review

作者介绍:

Wallace Stevens (October 2, 1879 – August 2, 1955) was a major American Modernist poet. He was born in Reading, Pennsylvania, and spent most of his adult life working for an insurance company in Connecticut. His best-known poems include "Anecdote of the Jar," "The Emperor of Ice Cream," "The Idea of Order at Key West," "Sunday Morning," and "Thirteen Ways of Looking at a Blackbird."

评论

跟他的诗歌一样，充满了对诗歌对文学对人性的信仰。

靠着这本诗论集，还是没能读懂Stevens的 “Notes toward a supreme fiction”

史蒂文斯版的诗与哲学之争，以现实和想象（相互依存）为关键词。诗人无使命，诗人享受存在，诗人的角色是帮助人们过自己的生活。不知道史是不是在自己的暗喻中迷路了，有些观点与他在Opus Posthumous中表达的完全不一致。这提醒我以后阅读“金句体”材料更要小心。（苦笑，在我的阅读层面讲是诗与散文之争，比他的诗更难读啊我敲）

散文。。。写的真是好 难怪 Borges Woolf 张枣都念念不忘 英雄所见略同

开端《斐卓篇》就是一个很好的隐喻。华莱斯的诗论浪漫色彩很重，和他的诗大不一样。

因为你是必要的天使，所以你会再次看见地球啊！
