Gregory Bateson was a philosopher, anthropologist, photographer, naturalist, and poet, as well as the husband and collaborator of Margaret Mead. With a new foreword by his daughter Mary Katherine Bateson, this classic anthology of his major work will continue to delight and inform generations of readers.

"This collection amounts to a retrospective exhibition of a working life. . . . Bateson has come to this position during a career that carried him not only into anthropology, for which he was first trained, but into psychiatry, genetics, and communication theory. . . . He . . . examines the nature of the mind, seeing it not as a nebulous something, somehow lodged somewhere in the body of each man, but as a network of interactions relating the individual with his society and his species and with the universe at large."--D. W. Harding, "New York Review of Books"

"[Bateson's] view of the world, of science, of culture, and of man is vast and challenging. His efforts at synthesis are tantalizingly and cryptically suggestive. . . . This is a book we should all read and ponder."--Roger Keesing, "American Anthropologist"

Gregory Bateson (1904-1980) was the author of "Naven" and "Mind and Nature."

"Part 1: Metalogues" are the best among the dialogue genre....perhaps only second to Plato and Galileo....

经过Guattari才明白为什么要读Bateson

生态思维

Gregory was without doubt a transdisciplinary thinker, and his understanding of life between external randomness and natural selection is just fascinating. I love his thoughts, but not much about his wording actually.
