author Janine Benyus, renown animal behaviorist, writes in clear and simple terms as she explores the subtleties of communication in the wild kingdom. The direction a lion points its ears shows you if it is curious or threatened; when a gorilla hoots, it's telling its group to start moving; when a gray wolf holds its tail straight out, it's ready to attack and when a male crocodile shoots a fountain of water into the air; it's courting its mate.
