With a distinguished career spanning more than sixty years, Richard Wilbur stands as one of America's preeminent men of letters. Collected Poems 1943-2004 is the comprehensive collection of Wilbur's astonishing, timeless work. It will serve as the most referenced trove of this beloved poet's best verses for many years to come. In Trackless Woods
In trackless woods, it puzzled me to find
Four great rock maples seemingly aligned, As if they had been set out in a row
Before some house a century ago,
To edge the property and lend some shade.
I looked to see if ancient wheels had made
Old ruts to which the trees ran parallel, But there were none, so far as I could tell-There'd been no roadway. Nor could I find the square
Depression of a cellar anywhere, And so I tramped on further, to survey
Amazing patterns in a hornbeam spray
Or spirals in a pine cone, under trees
Not subject to our stiff geometries.

he is good at creating nuanced and emotionally stirring image to convey how he really feels everything...splendid..but not my kind of thing..
