With a new afterword by Michael Cunningham What Catherine Sloper lacks in brains and beauty, she makes up for by being "very good." The handsome Morris Townsend would do anything to win her hand—even if it means pretending that he loves the homely ingénue, and cares nothing for her opulent wealth.

蛮好挑本他的其他小说读的。。真该听Hillis Miller的话去读Wings of the Dove的，下次吧。。

This is a novel about money. During the Realistic Period, the Civil War just ended and it torn all things apart. It was a tough time. Money blinds people and takes you two apart. But I can't understand why Catherine turned Morris down. I mean if I were she, I would do some lunacy, elopement. I won't sacrifice my happiness and my life just to a stupid revenge. It's not very sensible. If you really care your child, give their love a go. Her father was the cause of this tragic romance and let his daughter's heart broken and dead.
