Meg Wolitzer brings her characteristic wit and intelligence to a provocative story about the evolution of a marriage, the nature of partnership, the question of a male or female sensibility, and the place for an ambitious woman in a man's world.

The moment Joan Castleman decides to leave her husband, they are 35,000 feet above the ocean on a flight to Helsinki.

Joan's husband, Joseph, is one of America's preeminent novelists, about to receive a prestigious international award, and Joan, who has spent 40 years subjugating her own literary talents to fan the flames of his career, has finally decided to stop. From this gripping opening, Meg Wolitzer flashes back to Smith College and Greenwich Village in the 1950s and follows the course of the marriage that has brought the couple to this breaking point - one that results in a shocking revelation.

With her skillful storytelling and pitch-perfect observations, Wolitzer has crafted a wise and candid look at the choices all men and women make - in marriage, work, and life

The twist is no surprising at all. The story gets the readers to think really hard about relationships and differences between men and women. Love do get us to do crazy things. The thing is that even if we are doing it willingly, there might still be bitterness involved and people gonna get hurt. Change for you because of love? Such an illusion ...

有点小失望。感觉写得不到位。

-----
读完了书下一步可以看电影了。虽然twist一开始就猜到了但是中后段还是看得停不下来。

电影真是什么都没拍出来

书评

看完以后心里感觉就是各种矛盾，总有种女主的故事将会在几年后被复制到我的身上，到时候我或许也会是这样一点一点把自己锁死在婚姻的坟墓里。尽管有这样的担心，一边看书，一边还是会不停的批评女主的各种做法，旁观者清。因此，更加喜欢这本书带来的这种真实的感觉。 结尾的意...
