The dazzling new novel by the author of Waterland approaches the riddle of life from the agonized perspective of Bill Unwin, a middle-aged orphan, premature widower, and failed suicide suddenly obsessed by the diaries of his Victorian ancestor, a man whose fall from happiness eerily parallels his own. "He writes like a Henry James reborn after the sexual revolution."--New York Times Book Review.

Broken, entangled, disorderd, I hate postmodernism.

一头一尾非常精彩。The middle part，就像他自己说的，is like a staged performance.
ps.情节看的出来深受byatt影响。
