Exquisitely nubile and very rebellious Fionna Downs has a fantasy about her grandmother, the richly loathed, perversely loved, and arrogantly wealthy Violet Enright.

Somebody shoots the domineering matriarch aboard her luxury yacht, sneaks out the door, locks it from the outside, and disappears, presumably somewhere into Lake Michigan.

Suspects among family members and self-professed friends would be dazzlingly abundant. There would be the hippie ex-priest with the jewel-crazy wife, the bisexual surgeon with the nymphomaniacal wife, the discredited bishop, the somewhat sinister banker, and the mysterious visitor from County Mayo. Plus... as a kind of thrill and terrifying afterthought, young Fionna herself.
