

Roar of the Heavens

Suddenly, as if from nowhere, a surge of water rose to Warren Raines's chest. He clawed at the dark water, half running, half swimming, trying to grab onto anything to keep from being swept away. In the glare of the lightning, he could see his mother standing there with little Ginger in her arms, completely surrounded by rushing water.

"Let go," his mother yelled. "We'll catch you!"

Warren released his grip. A second later, when the current had swept him to the place where his mother had been, she was gone.
