A 1050-page definitive study on the making of the Filipino nation and republic. Part I covers the Quest for the Filipino Nation State; Part II covers Our National Identity, History and Destiny and Part III covers Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow. Edited by Dr Jose V. Abueva, the book is part of the UP Anthology of Filipino Socio-Political Thought since 1972 when the country was governed by martial law. With contributions from known scholars and political scientists from the University of the Philippines. ---Excerpt from the Foreword:" A unique value of this book may be its presentation of alternative ways of looking at and seeing the making of the Philippine nation and nation-state. Stated in this wise by Jose V. Abueva, the Editor of this volume and of the Anthology, of which this volume is the opener, this means an oblation to the thoughtful reader of a rich and varied mix of ideas, approaches, perspectives, persona of writers, and interpretation. The work shares with history its predilection for the unique and the singular for what is different and unrepeatable historical fact. It does not, in format, look or read like most historical works, disjointed as it deceptively appears. It results nonetheless in becoming a work of history, the work of historians in many cases, through felicitously not so in all cases. The book shares with history, as written record, much of what goes into the making of history...Premises in this Foreword considered, and this anthology demonstrating the capability and the quality of their articulation of Filipino socio-political thought; in light moreover of the further research overall that must needs be done in order to fill gaps and answer important questions in Philippine historiography, the bottom line is clear. The Filipino is worth writing for."
