Jammed copier machines, new assignments with unrealistic deadlines, duplication of efforts—if such occurrences constitute another day on the job, Patrick Regan offers solace and amusement by presenting humorous quips alongside real-world on-the-job photos of occupations like human cannonball, vermin control agent, and bulletproof vest tester. Instead of reaching for the want ads, find perspective through more than 30 portraits of less-than-ideal occupations, including: Casket Maker: Forty years on the job, and not one lousy time has a customer commented on the craftsmanship and attention to detail. Lost Baggage Handler: Congratulations. You will forever be remembered as the lady who ruined Christmas. Deodorant Scent Tester: No way around it—this job is the pits.
