There's only so much goodness a person can take some days, until it's time to redress the balance in the world and spread a little needless meanness. Nothing too nasty of course, just a little chalk to offset the cheese, a little poke in the eye to balance the pat on the back. After all, the world would be a very dull place without a little mischief! In this dastardly little book, Justin Rosenholtz has come up with one dark deed for every day of the year. For example: Day 1 - Borrow your friend's mobile and download a really embarrassing ring tone, imagine their horror when the phone rings on a crowded train playing a Spice Girls medley; Day 14 - Take revenge on the insanely well-organized office creep by randomly moving their files around...; and Day 23 - Many people love their crossword puzzles. That is why you should take every opportunity to fill in several clues incorrectly. In ink.
