A terrific critic's thoughtful selection of big-budget Hollywood films that are actually worth the time of the discerning moviegoer. With so many big budget movies out there, how do we distinguish between the mere crowd pleasers and the blockbusters that are worthwhile? Consider a typical Friday night. You're desperate for a good film. But then, faced with the intimidating vastness of choices, you blank on the name of that feature you've been meaning to see. Turn to Now in Theaters Everywhere, Kenneth Turan's indispensable guide to the best big films of the last decade. Whether you're looking for a disaster movie that's not a disaster (Volcano) or wondering if Elf really deserves a spot on your Netflix queue (yes!) this book will guide you to great films that don't disappoint.
