Gina, an unassuming young woman, is kidnapped by two men. Frank, the romantic, and Gordon, the sadist, use the terrified girl for their pleasure, keeping her prisoner in a room full of mirrors. While Gordon introduces Gina to the whip, the cane, and the rope, Frank introduces her to the kiss and the gentle touch, and a sexual awakening that leaves her hungry for more. We watch Gina change from a frightened girl to a fully sexual woman, in the context of constant torture and sexual stimulation. In the end the boundaries dissolve between consensual and nonconsensual, between pleasure and pain, between control and love.
