Hanging Out the Wash, by San Francisco Chronicle columnist Adair Lara, celebrates the many ways people find peace in life's small, cherished moments. The title comes from a column Adair Lara wrote describing how much her mother treasured the quiet time spent hanging the family's laundry on a clothesline, refusing a dryer even when she could afford one. This collection reveals and celebrates the sidelines of life people cherish but sometimes overlook writing letters in longhand, re-reading a favorite novel, washing the dishes by hand, and driving the scenic route to their destination. Lovely, funny, sad, true, and inspiring. Anne Lamott/p
