"The mere suggestion of an image or idea can evoke heavy emotions." So begins Irene Kai's "What Do You See?", a book of photography that contains images to challenge the reader's assumptions and judgments. It serves as a mirror for the readers to look deeper into themselves. With beautiful, provocative, and sometimes erotic images of the human body, "What Do You See?" asks this question: Do you have the courage to see the truth? This beautifully designed book showcases 17 of Kai's thoughtful and inspiring black and white photos, as well as text from four spiritual traditions to encourage self-reflection and abandoning presumptions, and challenge the reader's personal biases.
