First published in French, Marx's The Poverty of Philosophy (1847) was composed during his years in Brussels, when he was developing his economic views and, through confrontations with the chief leaders of the working-class movement, establishing his intellectual standing.

In this classic work, which laid the foundation of ideas later developed in Capital, Marx polemicized against then premier French socialist, Pierre-Joseph Proudhon. Proudhon wanted to unite the best features of such contraries as competition and monopoly. He hoped to save the good features of economic institutions while eliminating the bad. Marx, however, declared that no equilibrium was possible between the antagonisms in any given economic system. Social structures were transient historical forms determined by the productive forces: "The handmill gives you society with the feudal lord; the steam mill, society with the industrial capitalist."

搞不明白辩驳一个人的观点有这么值得花时间么？逐字逐句地论述Proudhon的观点哪里不对，没意思。全书写的最好的就是前言。而且起这么宏大的命题，进去看到的内容，感觉真恶心。
