In 1795 Immanuel Kant proclaimed that the peoples of the earth have entered into a 'universal community'. Since Kant wrote this the processes of inter-connection between the peoples of the earth has grown even more pronounced and the notion of 'cosmopolitics' has thus come to seem a defining one for the contemporary age. As such this volume makes a timely contribution to contemporary debates about international law, global ecology and economy and transnational synergies. The volume is inter-disciplinary and is intended to be a contribution to a debate that crosses borders and disciplines.
