Family means everything to 12-year-old Rebecca Bernstein. Even after a fire destroys their farm and the family must relocate to the bustling city of Winnipeg, Rebecca feels safe and happy as long as everyone is together. But life is hard in the city, and Papa cannot find work. Rebecca's greatest fears are realized when she is sent into foster care until Papa can earn more money. She is terrified to discover that she'll be living with a Ukrainian family. Jews and Ukrainians were archenemies in the old country. What if the Kostianuks hate her?

Rebecca discovers an unexpected soulmate in Sophie, the Kostianuks' daughter. Normally shy, Rebecca soon finds herself battling prejudice both in the schoolyard and at home in order to protect the forbidden friendship. Fighting anti-Semitism, Rebecca comes to appreciate what faith means to her and learns some important truths about her parents' personal and spiritual sacrifices.
