‘A cycle of a dozen lyrical poems exploring issues of African-American identity through delicately interwoven images. . . . Laden with meaning, the poetry is significant and lovely. Cooper's paintings, with vibrant, unsentimentalized characters in earth tone illuminated with gold, are warm, contemplative'a beautiful complement to Thomas's eloquence. A must.’ 'K. ‘Poems rooted in home, family, and the African-American experience… Highly readable and attractive.’ 'BL.
