In the spring of 1943, Audrey Watson, a spirited young woman from Churchill's spy agency, set out from London on a journey that would change her life. Her destination was Chungking, a squalid but strangely romantic city on the Yangtze River and the wartime capital of China. At a tea party given by Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, she met Max Oxford, an intelligence officer in the Royal Air Force, who had escaped from Hong Kong after it fell to the Japanese. In the mountains of southwest China, Max and Audrey began a lifelong love that would sustain them through good times and bad - through war, separation, loss, and Audrey's search for identity as colonial wife in postwar Asia.

作者介绍:

At Least We Lived is the first book by Emma Oxford, Max and Audrey's elder daughter, and it is based on her parents' remarkable collection of letters and journals. Emma began the book when she lived recently in Hong Kong, and she supplemented her parents' eyewitness accounts of life in Asia with her own extensive research in the region. Emma grew up in Malaysia and England, and graduated from Oxford University. She has spent her career working in both the UK and the US, and now lives in Washington DC.

评论

签售本，作者将她父母在华援助的传奇经历娓娓道来：相识于宋美龄的宴会，颇为周折的两次婚礼，两地分居的鱼雁传书，香港沦陷的圣诞逃亡，亚非欧的多次辗转，第一次的难产，和友人诀别竟成永别。至少我们还活着也许是他们生存下来最好的理由

The author signed the book to me, but I have to say it's just a ordinary family biography.
