Alex is running for his life. After making fun of the notorious bully Brick Johnson, he's now convinced that Brick is out to get him. There is only one way to survive Brick Johnson--take karate lessons and become a powerful sensei. But after Brick shows up in karate class and treats Alex with respect, Alex's picture of him begins to change. How can Brick be a bully and a nice guy at the same time? Accompanied by Dan Yaccarino's humorous illustrations, this funny, fast-paced story challenges readers to explore the way we think about people--and to break down the stereotypes that may prevent us from finding true friendship.
