Crash, boom, bang: destroy! There's nothing children love more than the satisfying smashing and bashing of things being demolished. Now, they can do it in the name of science. And they'll enjoy it so much that they won't even think they're learning physics! Just imagine the expression on kids' faces and their delight as they power cardboard racecars with ordinary balloons or launch homemade rockets. All scientific terms are explained in language that children will both understand and appreciate - and the safety precautions make sure the science stays fun and worry-free.
