Nicholas was a little boy who could not use his legs. The children in his village did not play with him. Like his father, he became skilled with his hands and decided to fix as many broken and unwanted toys and dolls as he could. Nicholas had an unselfish wish, to make children happy, so he decided to give the toys to children in the village on their birthdays. The father of a sick little girl from the other side of the mountain appears at Nicholas's door one day with a plea. He is too poor to buy a doll to celebrate her birthday and lift her spirits. Nicholas gladly makes the most beautiful doll ever for her but becomes lost in a terrible storm on his way home from delivering the gift. In the end, Nicholas is rewarded for his efforts in a way that boys and girls around the world look forward to every year.
