Fourteen-year-old Josh and his friend Shan are facing hard times on their families' farms in Central Texas in 1934. It's the days of the Dust Bowl and Great Depression, and rain is as scarce as money. With the long dry spell have come wild animals with flashing teeth and deadly rabies. Dust storms known as black blizzards are raging, threatening lives and destroying crop land. Will a rainmaker bring rain? Will their families lose their homes? Will Josh's and Shan's friendship survive? From rabid animals attacks to a deadly flood to a barreling freight train, Josh is in for an adventure he will never forget. ?Provides a wonderful and useful tool for teachers and parents, as well as brings great enjoyment to all readers young and old? Carol Mangan, fifth grade teacher, Midland, Texas
