When Fred and his dear cat Rick visit Fred's grandmother in Vancouver, Rick starts acting very strangely. He doesn't want to play, doesn't want to eat, and he stays out all night long. Fred's convinced that someone is bewitching Rick, so one night he sets out with his grandmother and his new friends to find out where Rick has been going. When they track him down, Fred finds not a witch, but a fairy princess named Smaranda. And he finds Rick has been doing some very important-and very strange-work of his own. Fred's Midnight Prowler is a story about the fears that can rise in active imaginations, and how reality can be stranger and more beautiful than we imagine.
