- Key West--an architectural treasure trove of houses built in the 19th century- Eyebrow houses, shotgun houses, Conch Victorians- Color photographs throughout- Many of

Key West's houses were built by ship's carpenters with no plans other than memories of seaport homes from their past- Widow's walks borrowed from New England, overhanging eaves (eyebrows) from the West Indies- Builders added details from architectural fads of the time--from Greek Revival columns to Creole trellises- Many charming anecdotes about old Key West gleaned from interviews with descendants of the families who built houses there- For anyone who loves to look at charming old houses and imagine their histories
