This new series examines the circumstances and events surrounding some of the monumental conflicts that changed the history of warfare and the world. Each book includes maps that highlights the fields of battle and sidebars that take a more detailed look at some of the most significant and interesting people, places, and ideas that played a part in the battle. In June 1950, Communist leader Kim Il Sung's North Korean forces invaded South Korea, seeking to bring South Korea under the rule of the Communist north. In response, United Nations troops launched a counterattack that turned back the North Koreans.
