Pioneering the holistic process and green building in New Jersey, William E.S. Kaufman founded WESK Architecture in 1995. The principles that drive the creative force of the firm today are generated from deep within the individual roots of the organization. Teams of architects, interior designers, master craftsmen, and landscape designers help execute the result. The outcomes are a unique blend of modern lifestyles and meticulously crafted traditional residential constructions affectionately portrayed in the book as 'home'. The subjects featured are an eclectic selection of individual style, material and form. The homes reflect their owners' programmatic and aesthetic sensibilities and the regional vernacular of their respective surroundings.
