When John Marcus Wilson was born in 1982, he weighed just under five pounds. He grew and was a blessing to his parents, Larry and Shelly Wilson. But it wasn't long before Shelly realized that there was something different about her baby. By the time he was two years old, she noticed a lot of things were different. Shelly began asking the doctors and then later the teachers: "What's wrong with Marcus?" When he was in second grade, the answer came. Shelly was relieved and scared. Marcus did have something wrong and it had a name. This is a true account of a little boy struggling with life and how his family helped him.
