Welcome to the world of Ryan Boudinot--where angry yuppies, state-sponsored patricide, bee-keeping femme fatales, and murderous salesman are the norm. Beginning with the title story "The Littlest Hitler," in which nine-year-old Davy devises--with the help of his father--a Halloween costume that will make him the scariest kid in the fourth grade, and deftly cruising through a dozen more stories that reveal the everyday outrage and surreal banalities of American life, Boudinot displays a stunning new literary voice that speaks to a generation that can't help wishing for a better world.
