In his debut novel, Lookin' For Luv, Carl Weber gave us a hip, smart, outrageously funny look at the guys in Terry McMillan's world. Now, in "Married Men," he's back with another round of the battle of the sexes, as four lifelong friends struggle to be cool with the everyday hassles of marriage. Kyle Richmond had everything -- a beautiful wife, three wonderful kids, and a successful business. Everyone thought he was the happiest man on earth. That was until he woke up one morning and realized his wife was white. Easy-going Allen Jackson can please his bossy Mama and his gold-digging fiancée -- just not at the same time. Will Duncan is the nicest man you'll ever meet -- with a wife whose mouth is so big she should consider a career in broadcasting. And smooth and sexy Jay's "the man" -- not only for his wife, but for all the other lovely ladies he can't resist. Kyle, Allen, Will and Jay are finding out that marriage means more than acting like the Huxtables. When each is shown the door by his furious woman, the result is a rowdy romp through sleazy hotels, divorce court, jail and Viagra. And as the friends fend off strippers, trippers, psycho ex-football players and stuff too freaky to mention, they know there's one thing they can always count on. . . each other.
