Astonishing answers to unspoken questions revealed As Charlie instructed his friends and the motorcycle bouncers, they carefully positioned the engineless cessna plane on the roof of the nightclub. Charlie was on the roof and had eyebolts put in so he could wire the plane to the roof, while his helpers held the plane in place. Once attached, they put on the wings and a wooden propeller was wired to the nose. The great search for Amelia Earhart party was soon to begin. This was a planned fourteen day party. With a flight simulator on the back patio and the airplane on the roof, he rented a large sign to advertise the nightly events. By law, due to the size of the one-foot lettering, the sign was not allowed in the front of the bar. Charlie moved the sign to the back of the nightclub property at night and then moved it back to the street every morning. Unbeknownst to Charlie, his manager and barmaids were in a scheme with his partner to keep him drunk and high on drugs so he would not miss the money they were stealing. His partner was using this money against him to start up another trucking company with another man. 20% of the proceeds of this book will go to charity.
