A brush with death is all Kate Rollins needs to realize that her life has to change. With her marriage failing and her young son aching for attention, Kate is ready to make a bold move -- and an inheritance from the grandmother she never knew is her chance to turn everything around. The rundown cafe in Lost Peak, Montana is a far cry from her high-powered job in Los Angeles, but Kate is eager for a taste of life on her own -- and handsome Chance McLain won't change her mind. Until he uncovers her son's secrets -- and knocks down Kate's carefully constructed defenses. Kate may be determined to resist him, but Chance can't ignore the desire he feels for her -- or the suspicion that somebody wants her to leave Lost Peak. With the promise of a future together tangled up in the ghosts of her past, Kate and Chance must believe in each other before they can believe in love.
