Here are poems teenagers will treasure, inscribe in diaries, and share with friends for years to come."The truth isn't always beauty but the hunger for it is."--Nadine Gordimer
Experienced anthologist and teacher Patrice Vecchione has created a unique thematic anthology which teenagers will pore over as they seek to be true, and have to face telling lies. Drawing on poets from Margaret Atwood to Langston Hughes, from Walt Whitman to Yevgeny Yevtusenko, she shows how truth is necessary, but how it can hurt, how lies may kill, and yet can soothe. The poems touch on a range of motivations and emotions including fear, guilt, forgiveness, trust, pride and anger. Some express surprising truths while others reveal painful lies. A sensitive gift, a great classroom resource, a companion in the hardest struggles of adolescence, Truth and Lies will be a perfect bridge from a teenager's diary to the world's greatest poetry. Song of the Bald Eagle we want what is real
don't deceive us!
-Crow#1455
Opinion is a flitting thing, But truth outlasts the Sun--If then we cannot own them both--Possess the oldest one-- -Emily Dickinson
