What would happen if youngsters ruled the roost? The answers might be surprising. Players review typical -- and sometimes tricky -- scenarios and guess how real-life 8- to 14-year-olds say they'd handle things if they were in charge. For example, what to do when sonny boy comes home with blue hair the night of a family wedding? In another scenario, junior refuses to eat broccoli. How to convince -- or make -- him? Based on surveys from parents and children, this book-game combo, which can be played with friends or enjoyed alone, contains dozens of questions based on parental dilemmas, with answers provided by the children.
