I like you

and you like me,

and though we're different as can be . . .

we both like being friends!

In lilting rhyme and charming images two true-blue best friends proclaim their differences, and have fun with them too. So when one wants to play baseball and the other prefers a game of dress-up, a true pal finds she can pitch while wearing a tiara. And though one buddy favors days and the other nights-both like having pillow fights!

In this tender, joyful portrait of friendship's give-and-take, young readers will easily find reflections of their own special relationships.
