Young Sarah wants to be a shepherd, even though usually only boys are allowed to tend the sheep. But with a family full of girls, what's a father to do? Sarah goes to the fields with the flock and her cousins, and on her first night is astounded by the sight of angels announcing the birth of a Saviour. Although her cousins all boys disappear, Sarah is mindful of her responsibility, and she and all the sheep make their way back to Bethlehem where she encounters a baby in a manger. This charming picture book for ages four to seven retells the Christmas story from the perspective of a plucky young girl who learns that she is loved by her father, and by God the Father.

Features and Benefits The only picture book that tells the Christmas story from a young girl's perspective. Written by a pastor and mom for her daughter. Teaches young girls about the unconditional love of God.
